Wake Tech Update

On the afternoon of November 26, PCEA National Vice President Glenn Hessee was a guest lecturer for a Wake Tech Civil Engineering Estimating Class. Glenn discussed current opportunities in our industry in commercial building estimating and project management and described what goes on in the businesses of the larger contractors on a day to day basis. Glenn also discussed a past historical renovation project of an Observatory in California, demonstrated the Planswift On Screen Take Off Software and discussed PCEA’s mission of promoting the Construction Industry as a viable career option to young people. Glenn discussed the PCEA Triangle Chapter’s scholarships at NCSU, UNC Charlotte and ECU. Glenn also discussed the PCEA National Ted G. Wilson Scholarship and sent a copy of the current scholarship application form to the class instructor to forward to students.

NCDENR Secretary Addresses Construction Industry Leadership

John Skvarla, Secretary for the NC Department of Environmental and Natural Resources, spoke to attendees at a recent Carolinas AGC Leadership Function in Durham. He reviewed his efforts in transforming the department from a bloated bureaucracy to a leaner and more efficient agency that will save the tax payers millions of dollars by cutting red tape, streamlining permitting and employing a more customer friendly attitude—all while protecting the environment and balancing the economic impacts.

Skvarla’s remarks were followed by a presentation from Kristen Measimer, student president of the NCSU / CAGC Student Chapter and Dr. Ed Jaselskis, an NCSU professor in the Department of Civil, Construction, and Environmental Engineering. The pair spoke about how the student chapter is revving up its efforts in connecting students with the construction industry.
