NC Legislature Reviewing Bills To Deter Worker Misclassification

Legislation to deter worker misclassification is receiving a thorough review in the North Carolina Legislature as reported by the Carolinas AGC. Over the next few weeks a group of legislators will consider putting more changes to HB 482, a bill aimed at fighting illegal employment practices. Several members of the committee were concerned with an added provision that specified owner operators of transportation companies be considered independent contractors. Another provision that is considering to be restored would allow state investigators to be able to issue stop orders to companies operating without proper workers compensation insurance. The Carolinas AGC has been working with the legislators to not add measures that would put general contractors at undue risk of losing their licenses or being disbarred from bidding on public works projects.
